

ERASMUS+ Student Study Grant 2015-16

- UK students who decide to spend up to a year of their course in Europe in 2015-16 through the Erasmus+ programme will be eligible for grants of up to 300 euro per month for study depending on the country they go to.
- For study abroad, disadvantaged (widening access) students will also receive 100 euro more per month.
- Disadvantaged students are identified using the HEFCW low participation and widening access databases.
- The Erasmus+ grant is a contribution to the extra costs of living abroad, which is why it varies by country.
- Students still receive their UK maintenance grant or loan, there are no tuition fees in the host country, plus for many students spending a full year of study or training/working abroad, there is a substantial discount on any UK tuition fees for that year away.
- The grant is extra money, on top of the maintenance grant or loan and for long term study or training/working of a year, there is a substantial discount on any UK tuition fees for that year away.
- Many universities advise that students should not rely on it to cover every cost and should plan to have enough money to cover their first few months abroad themselves. Rent, food, socialising, travelling and how a student spends the money is very much down to the individual.
- Each year UK universities must apply to the UK National Agency for Erasmus+ funding for their students.
- How much each UK student can receive depends on the funding allocated to their university against the number of students from that university who want to take part. It will also depend on the country they go to, and if they want to do academic study or a student traineeship.
- Extra €100 for widening access
